

*New Service-

Academic Writing Skills and Self-Access Language Learning (AWSALL)

A new academic writing skills tutorial service focusing on self-access language learning (SALL) is now available at the Language Centre for UGC-funded undergraduate and postgraduate students to improve your academic writing skills. You will need to take a writing pre-test or provide a writing sample for diagnostic purposes. You will then meet with a Language Advisor to discuss the writing issues you have and be assigned SALL tasks to complete in your own time. Please note that this service is offered on a first-come, first-served basis.

By joining this service, you will be able to:

- Improve your academic writing skills at a place and time that suits you most
- Identify areas for improvement and engage in self-access language learning by completing tasks on academic writing pathways (content, organization, grammar, vocabulary and in-text citations/referencing skills)
- Receive language advice from your Language Advisor in a variety of ways: face-to-face or online
- Monitor and control your own progress of learning

Intended for: UGC-funded undergraduate and postgraduate students, particularly suited to students taking University English I and II courses

Mode: Face-to-Face OR Online

No. of Sessions: 3 consultation sessions per semester for undergraduate students, and 5 consultation sessions per academic year for postgraduate students

Registration Page: <https://goo.gl/nK2hcK>

Registration Deadline: 21 September, 2018
