

Academic Writing Skills and Self-Access Language Learning (AWSALL)

Registration Deadline: 6 October 2024

An academic writing skills tutorial service focusing on self-access language learning (SALL) is now available at the Language Centre for UGC-funded undergraduate and postgraduate students to improve their academic writing skills. Students will need to take a writing pre-test or provide a writing sample for diagnostic purposes. Each student will then meet with a Language Advisor to discuss the writing issues he/she has and complete SALL tasks in his/her own time. Please note that this service is offered on a first-come, first-served basis.

By joining this service, you will be able to:

- Improve your academic writing skills at a place and time that suit you most
- Identify areas for improvement and engage in self-access language learning by completing tasks on academic writing pathways (content, organization, grammar, vocabulary and in-text citations/referencing skills)
- Receive language advice from your Language Advisor either face-to-face or online
- Monitor and control your own progress of learning

Eligibility:

UGC-funded undergraduate and postgraduate students, particularly suited to students taking University English I and II courses

No. of Sessions:

3 consultation sessions per semester for undergraduate students, and
5 consultation sessions per academic year for postgraduate students

(This service will be provided face-to-face or via Zoom depending on students' preferred option.)

Enquiries: Rita Gill (Email: ritagill@hkbu.edu.hk | Tel: 3411 7362)

* Services are free and open only to UGC-funded students as stipulated by the UGC.

 Students are paired up with language advisors according to their available timeslots on a first-come, first-served basis.
